Project overview
A former gasoline station, vacant since 1981, was redeveloped using a $117,985 local brownfield TIF. This was a challenging site, not only due to size, but also its configuration, contamination, topography and zoning regulations. The development which sits in the local historic district demolished the existing building and constructed a 4,600-square-foot, three-story, mixed-use building. Total capital investment was approximately $1.4 million.
